It takes a community to raise a flag

Pride Week. Diversity chair at city hall ceremony: 'It makes me proud ... that so many people come out and support it'

JANE CAULFIELD
jane.caulfield@metronews.ca

Every year, as part of Pride Week in Saskatoon, the traditional rainbow flag is raised at city hall.

And this year, rather than having a public figure conduct the ceremony, Brice Field, chair of the Saskatoon Diversity Network, invited all event-goers to raise the flag with him, turning the event into a true community affair.

Week of events

The Saskatoon Pride Festival started June 8 and runs through June 15 with various events ongoing throughout the week.

- For more information visit saskatoonpride.ca.

"Pride is not about one person who is not here today or one person who is not here next weekend.... This year, we wanted to show that Pride is about community and the thousands of people that do support the queer community in Saskatoon," Field said.

Having worked with the festival for six years, Field said the flag-raising is one of the annual events he most looks forward to.

"It's a good feeling. Raising the rainbow flag is one of my favourite events.... It's one of the events I still get nervous about because it brings up a lot of emotions inside," he said. "It makes me proud that I am able to do this and that so many people come out and support it."

Echoing Field's sentiments, Coun. Darren Hill said attending the event sends an important message to the community.

"I think it's important that as many people as possible are here to celebrate the start of the Pride celebrations," Hill said. "Diversity and recognizing that is one of the key strategic goals for the city of Saskatoon.... It's my job to ensure that I'm representing everybody, not just those that I choose to."

Roughriders' focus shifts to execution as season closes in

Game-day mindset. Saskatchewan prepares for upcoming preseason battles with Stampeders, Eskimos

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

The Saskatchewan Roughriders' 2013 training camp kicked off its second week on Monday morning and head coach Corey Chamblin said it's time for players to shine.

Chamblin explained that while the first week of training camp was used for assessment and evaluation, the second week is all about execution.

"Now that we're going in to the second week, we want to prepare these guys and get their mindsets ready for a game heading into these preseason games," he said.

He noted the upcoming preseason games against the Edmonton Eskimos and Calgary Stampeders changed the environment for the team.

"One of the biggest things that I've been telling them is to make sure they go out there and play full-speed and make sure they show what they can do," said Chamblin.

"We're just trying to make sure we're getting in the mindset of how to play football games (and) that we're an intelligent football team."

The Roughriders' first preseason game is scheduled for June 14 in Edmonton, with kickoff at 7 p.m.

Forgetting a Rider's rough off-season

The Riders are ready to put the tumultuous off-season of running back Kory Sheets behind them.

Sheets was charged with domestic battery near Tampa, Fla., on Jan. 18 after police were called to a home in the area.

The state decided not to prosecute the case after Sheets successfully completed a domestic violence program.

"The Saskatchewan Roughriders were made aware of an incident involving Kory Sheets earlier in the year. As an organization, we have followed the process closely and have been assured the proper steps have been taken," the team said in a statement.

Sheets rushed for 1,277 yards and 11 touchdowns last season.

Funnel clouds spotted in Southeast Sask.

Two funnel clouds were spotted near Saltcoats in southeastern Saskatchewan on Monday.

Environment Canada had issued a tornado warning around 11:30 a.m., but lifted it about two hours later.

The areas affected included the Rural Municipality of Saltcoats, Bredenbury, Churchbridge, Calder and Wroxton.

A warning means funnel clouds have actually been spotted.

Witnesses were posting photos on the Internet almost as quickly as the weather changed.

Natural distraction

"You could see it start to break up and then in a few seconds it was gone."

Sidney Danyluk of Yorkton, who saw two funnel clouds while he was driving back from Saltcoats

Michael Lam says he was only 15 kilometres away when one of the funnel clouds touched down.

"I was just working and I happened to turn around to look at something. It was sunny where we were and I turned around and noticed the funnel cloud off in the distance," he said.

"Eventually it made its way to the ground and stuck on the ground for ... a good 10 or 15 minutes, at least."

Sidney Danyluk from Yorkton was driving back from Saltcoats when he saw not one, but two funnel clouds. He also saw one of them touch down.

"It was on the ground because you could see the dust blowing up around the bottom of it.

"They were pretty much in the same spot. We drove about 15 minutes down the highway and the one had started breaking up. You could see it start to break up and then in a few seconds it was gone."

Attempted murder

Charged youth appears in court

A 15-year-old charged with attempted murder in relation to a June 8 shooting made a brief court appearance on Monday morning.

The young man, who can't be named because he is a youth, remained quiet as a provincial judge read him his charges, which alongside attempted murder included mischief by willful damage under $5,000, breach of undertaking and a long list of weapons charges.

A release from the Saskatoon Police Service (SPS), said at roughly 11:45 a.m., the SPS received a 911 call indicating that the sound of gunshots was heard coming from the area of 21st Street and Avenue N.

Police said an unknown male had fired multiple shots from a rifle and the shots had struck two separate apartments, breaking two different windows.

On Monday morning, the court learned that the 15-year-old was allegedly targeting another individual and despite the fact both apartments were occupied, no one was injured.

2013 conference and festival. Planner says this year's event has the best speaker lineup yet

JANE CAULFIELD
jane.caulfield@metronews.ca

Starting Thursday, the Broadway area will be buzzing with creative energy, innovative thinking and musical magic as MoSo Conference and Moso Festival get underway.

"It's the biggest social media, mobile and interactive conference in Canada, with the best speaker lineup we've ever had," said Ryan Lebjak, a planning-committee member. "For the festival, we have more than 85 bands and DJs playing at nine venues, which is one of the largest festivals in Saskatchewan now."

With nearly 500 delegates registered, many from other parts of the province and country, Lebjak said this will be the biggest MoSo yet.

"It used to be that 90 per cent of the people attending are from Saskatoon, but now at least one-third of people are coming from places outside," said Lebjak.

Lebjak says the conference and festival have stayed strong by maintaining a local vibe throughout all four days.

"We want to maintain that kind of hometown feeling," he said. "When I talk to the speakers and the bands, they just love this size of conference. Here everyone knows everybody."

MoSo takes over Broadway from June 12 to 15. Tickets are still available and can be found at mosoconf.com.

Slain conservation officer honoured

A Saskatchewan conservation officer killed last month when he stopped to help police with a car crash has been honoured posthumously.

The province has recognized Justin Knackstedt with the Saskatchewan Award of Excellence.

There was also a moment of silence before a medal presentation in Prince Albert for protective services workers.

Knackstedt died May 31 after he was hit by a driver who was allegedly impaired and fleeing from police.

About 200 conservation officers walked in a procession at his funeral in Quill Lake, Sask., on the weekend.

Cash to grow

Saskatchewan will need to open up to foreign investment: Conference Board

A new report says Saskatchewan will need to attract $20 billion to $30 billion in capital investment per year until 2032 to finance growth.

And the Conference Board of Canada says that much money for resource mega-projects realistically isn't going to come from within Canada.

Report author Michael Grant says Saskatchewan has to be open to foreign investors — including state-owned enterprises.

Grant says a high-profile political objection to a deal could undermine the province's reputation as a good place to invest.

For example, the report says Saskatchewan has welcomed some Chinese companies to explore and conduct feasibility studies in potash.

It says the province needs to prepare for the day when a major Chinese state-owned company decides to invest.

Plenty of relationships

After Plenty Of Fish announced it was axing the 'intimate encounters' section of its internationally popular dating site, Metro took to the streets to see if people think online-dating sites are effective places to start long-term relationships.

JANE CAULFIELD

Arnold Van Lambalgen, music director CFCR, 31

"I think it doesn't matter where you meet someone.... Dating requires two willing participants. It will either work or it won't."

Kim Trischuk, student, 21

"I think it's effective. I know people who've definitely had success with it. But there's always that fear factor about the other person."

Keltie Kiendy, barista, 26

"It seems to work for some people, so, yeah, I think it's effective. Also, if you want to look for an 'intimate encounter,' it's probably better — and safer — to do that in person."

Sydne Cabalt, student, 21

"I think it is. If you're not into the bar scene or a little bit socially awkward it's just easier to put yourself out there that way and get to know people a little better first."

Keaira Koroluk, student, 22

"I think it can be a really successful way to finding someone … especially if you're not a super social person you can start by talking online and become more comfortable with them."

Doug Dixion, grocer, 26

"I think Plenty of Fish is treated like a hookup site. Maybe applying a fee would be more effective."

Nuclear liability. Feds propose raising cap to $1B from $75M

Nuclear operators will face a liability ceiling of $1 billion, up from the current $75 million that has stood for four decades, under proposed new federal legislation.

The change is expected next fall when Parliament resumes following the summer break, Natural Resources Minister Joe Oliver told a nuclear conference on Monday.

Nuclear operators will still be exclusively liable for nuclear damage, with no need to prove fault.

Canada also plans to join the International Atomic Energy Agency's convention on supplementary compensation for nuclear damage, which would add another $450 million to the compensation pool by drawing on additional funds from member countries, said Oliver.

Environmentalists want unlimited liability, but nuclear proponents say that would encourage a company involved in an accident to declare bankruptcy and walk away, leaving governments on the hook. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The existing long-term disability program, which kicks in after 13 weeks of illness, would also be changed to address the problems of the modern workplace, he added. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ghost plane raised from English Channel

Second World War bomber. German aircraft shot down during Battle of Britain

Lifting equipment raises a German Dornier bomber from the English Channel off Deal, England, on Monday. Divers discovered the aircraft, remarkably intact, in 2008. GARETH FULLER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A German Second World War bomber was raised from the bottom of the English Channel on Monday, after previous attempts were thwarted by poor conditions.

The Dornier Do-17 aircraft was shot down off the coast of Kent county in southeastern England more than 70 years ago during the Battle of Britain.

Nicknamed the Luftwaffe's "flying pencil" because of its narrow fuselage, it is believed to be the only intact example of the Dornier.

"It has been lifted and is now safely on the barge and in one piece," said Ajay Srivastava, a spokesman for the RAF Museum, which led the salvage operation.

The museum had been trying to raise the relic for a few weeks, but the operation was delayed by strong winds. In 2008, divers discovered the aircraft submerged in 15 metres of water. Experts say the bomber is remarkably undamaged despite the passage of time.

The Dornier was a mainstay of German bomber fleets during the Battle of Britain in 1940. The wreck is believed to have been shot down on Aug. 26 of that year at the height of the battle.

Museum officials plan to conserve the plane and put it on exhibition next to the wreck of a British Hawker Hurricane fighter aircraft that was also shot down during the battle.

Social-media crackdown

Kuwaiti woman jailed for 'insulting' emir tweets

A woman in Kuwait has been sentenced to 11 years in prison after convictions that include insulting the Gulf nation's ruler, opposition groups say.

Monday's court decision is among the harshest punishments given in the Gulf region as authorities increasingly crack down on perceived dissent on social media. Dozens of people across the Western-backed Gulf states have been sent to jail for Twitter and blog posts in the past year.

Opposition groups in Kuwait say Huda al-Ajmi faced three charges that included insulting the emir, which brought a one-year sentence. Five-year prison terms were given for allegedly calling for coup-style rebellion and violating laws on public discussions.

Kuwaiti media, including the pro-government Al Watan newspaper, also reported the sentencing.

Ottawa lines up new rules for pot

Medical marijuana. Patients allowed to buy prescribed amounts only from licensed growers who will be required to meet strict conditions

A budtender rolls a marijuana cigarette for a patient at a medical-marijuana dispensary in Los Angeles. Under new rules in Canada, the government will no longer produce or distribute medical pot and medical marijuana users will no longer be allowed to grow the product at home. DAVID MCNEW/GETTY IMAGES FILE

After two years of study and discussion, the federal government has finalized new rules for medical marijuana and granted a reprieve to pharmacists who opposed the rules in their draft form.

Health Minister Leona Aglukkaq rolled out the regulations Monday for formal publication in the Canada Gazette on Wednesday.

Under the new regime, the government will no longer produce or distribute medical pot and medical marijuana users will no longer be allowed to grow the product at home.

Health Canada said since the medical marijuana program was introduced in 2001, it has expanded to 30,000 people from the original 500 authorized to use the product.

"This rapid increase has had unintended consequences for public health, safety and security as a result of allowing individuals to produce marijuana in their homes," the department said in a news release.

"Under the new regulations, production will no longer take place in homes and municipal zoning laws will need to be respected, which will further enhance public safety."

In previous versions of the regulations, pharmacies were to distribute the product just like other medications, provoking concern from pharmacists, who expressed concerns about dispensing a product without sufficient research. They also cited security concerns.

The final version removes the pharmacists from the loop, leaving patients to rely on mailorder for their medical marijuana.

"While the courts have said that there must be reasonable access to a legal source of marijuana for medical purposes, we believe that this must be done in a controlled fashion in order to protect public safety," Aglukkaq said in a statement.

"These changes will strengthen the safety of Canadian communities while making sure patients can access what they need to treat serious illnesses."

She used similar reasoning last week when she introduced new hurdles for the creation of supervised drug-injection sites in response to a court ruling.

Reaction

Changes won't protect people, critics say

Physicians and pharmacists questioned the regulatory changes, saying there is little evidence that medical marijuana is either effective or safe.

The umbrella group representing the country's colleges of physicians and surgeons said the changes won't protect people.

"We believe that the new federal medical marijuana regulations put patients and the general public at risk," Dr. Rocco Gerace, president of the Federation of Medical Regulatory Authorities of Canada, said. "Physicians should not be asked to prescribe or dispense substances or treatments for which there is little or no evidence of clinical efficacy or safety." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians don't understand realities of strokes, poll finds

A new poll suggest Canadians don't have a great understanding of the realities of strokes, with nearly one in five thinking most strokes are fatal.

One in six Canadians seem to believe there is nothing a stroke survivor can do to prevent future strokes and more than one-third think the recovery period is limited to a few months. These statistics are included in the Heart and Stroke Foundation's annual report on stroke.

The report says 50,000 strokes occur in Canada each year and 315,000 Canadians are living with the effects of stroke. The foundation says those numbers will rise as the population continues to age.

Dr. Sean Dukelow is a physiatrist (a specialist in rehabilitation medicine) at the Hotchkiss Brain Institute Faculty of Medicine and the University of Calgary. He says more rehabilitation research is needed to figure out what help stroke survivors need and to develop ways to assist them.

The report says stroke costs the Canadian economy $3.6 billion a year in physician services, hospital costs, lost wages and decreased productivity. It is the third leading cause of death in Canada.

Search and rescue

Air force told year ago to vary hours, report reveals

The Canadian air force was told well over a year before being rapped on the knuckles by the auditor general that varying its hours of search-and-rescue operations would mean significantly improved response times for people in distress.

The Defence Research and Development Canada analysis says tinkering with the schedule would give joint rescue centres more leverage "to save lives without increasing" the staffing levels of air force units.

Despite the conclusion of the March 2012 report, the recommendation gathered dust until the military was taken to task in April by the auditor general, who found the rescue system is close to the "breaking point." In response, Defence Minister Peter MacKay "encouraged" local commanders to adjust their hours of operation.

The military is currently required to get a rescue aircraft off the runway within 30 minutes of an emergency call between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday to Friday, and within two hours outside that window.

Surveillance. Top Hong Kong law-enforcement official suggests it would be wise if Edward Snowden left town

This photo provided by The Guardian Newspaper in London shows Edward Snowden, who worked as a contract employee at the National Security Agency, on Sunday in Hong Kong. The Guardian identified Snowden as a source for its reports on intelligence programs after he asked the newspaper to do so on Sunday. THE GUARDIAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An apparent international cat-and-mouse game was in play Monday following the confession of Edward Snowden, a former CIA tech expert who leaked details of top-secret American surveillance programs to two news organizations and then hunkered down in a Hong Kong hotel.

Snowden, 29, stepped forward over the weekend as the source of leaks to Britain's The Guardian and the Washington Post about the U.S. government's sweeping monitoring of cellphone logs and web servers.

Hong Kong has an extradition treaty with the U.S., but China has the ultimate say over extradition requests in cases where the country's foreign interests could be at stake. Snowden said he chose Hong Kong because of its "strong tradition of free speech."

"The only thing I can do is sit here and hope the Hong Kong government does not deport me," Snowden told The Guardian.

Snowden reportedly checked out of a Hong Kong hotel on Monday. His subsequent whereabouts were not immediately known, but a top-ranking official in Hong Kong law enforcement suggested in a statement that Snowden would be wise to leave the city.

Hong Kong is "obliged to comply with the terms of agreements" with the U.S. government, including extraditing fugitives, said lawmaker Regina Ip, who was once the city's top security official.

Takeover cancelled

Telus calls off its plan to buy Mobilicity

Telus Corp. called off its plan to buy small wireless provider Mobilicity on Monday after Ottawa signalled last week that it would not allow the deal.

Mobilicity, which has about 250,000 customers, said it will instead go ahead with a recapitalization plan, which will be voted on by debt holders on June 25.

"The company will continue to provide updates as warranted," Mobilicity said in a brief statement.

Telus had offered to pay $380 million for Mobilicity, but its deal required the federal government to make an exception to certain rules and allow the larger company to transfer ownership of wireless spectrum owned by Mobilicity.

However, Industry Minister Christian Paradis quashed that idea last week when he said the current rules would stand.

6 men sentenced to 20 years in failed terror plot

Six British men inspired by Islamic extremist material were sentenced Monday to almost 20 years in prison each for plotting a bomb and gun attack on a far-right rally a year ago.

The men, from the Birmingham area of England, had earlier pleaded guilty to planning an attack on the anti-immigrant English Defence League.

The plot failed when they arrived after the rally had ended. They were caught by chance after a car was impounded for insurance violation. The vehicle contained guns, a homemade bomb and other weapons.

Judge Nicholas Hilliard said the suspects had intended to cause serious injuries and possibly deaths.

He said the men had immersed themselves in a "tide of apparently freely available extremist material."

'Extraordinary gift'. Mandela's condition 'unchanged' in hospital

Nelson Mandela was in serious but stable condition in a Pretoria hospital for the third day Monday with a lung infection, and a foundation led by retired archbishop Desmond Tutu described the 94-year-old anti-apartheid hero as a "gift" to South Africa.

As family members visited South Africa's first black president in hospital, the government announced — in only the second communication on Mandela since he was hospitalized on Saturday — that his condition was "unchanged."

A statement issued for the Desmond and Leah Tutu Legacy Foundation described Mandela as "the beloved father of our nation" and offered prayers for a man seen by many around the world as a symbol of reconciliation because of his peacemaking role when white racist rule ended in South Africa.

Mandela "once again endures the ravages of time in hospital," said the Cape Town-based foundation, which was founded by Tutu and his wife Leah to promote peace. "We offer our thanks to God for the extraordinary gift of Mr. Mandela, and wish his family strength."

Tutu, 81, was also a vigorous campaigner against apartheid, which ended when all-race elections were held in 1994 and Mandela became president. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bangladesh. Inspectors accused of negligence in deadly building collapse

Bangladesh has suspended seven inspectors it accuses of negligence for renewing the licences of factories in a building that collapsed in April, killing more than 1,100 people, a top Labour Ministry official said Monday.

The official, Mikail Shipar, said an investigation found that the inspectors never even visited the five factories housed in the eight-storey Rana Plaza building. He said one of the factories had been operating without any licence since 2008, while the others were licensed through 2013.

At least 1,129 people died when the building in the suburb of Savar collapsed April 24.

The number of factories in Bangladesh has soared in recent years to more than 240,000, while their safety is checked by only 50 government inspectors who issue operating licences, said Obaidul Islam, a senior official at the office of the Chief Inspector of Factories.

"There are too few inspectors for too many factories," Islam said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Alcohol ads influencing teen girls, medical journal says

Risks of drinking. Health warnings should be put in ads, editorial argues

A medical journal is raising concerns about alcohol advertising, saying young girls are being influenced by the ads.

The editorial in this week's issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal says health warnings should be embedded in alcohol ads, so that young girls understand the risks of drinking.

The author, Dr. Ken Flegel, says parents should also model responsible alcohol consumption for their children.

The editorial says studies from the U.S. show that alcohol advertising aimed at young women is being viewed more commonly by young girls. The studies also show that increased exposure to alcohol advertising is linked to an increase in drinking in adolescents.

Unhappy shareholders. Walmart vote tally shows dissent against executives

Walmart's final shareholder vote for its board of directors showed another year of dissent against key executives and directors, including its CEO Mike Duke, as the company deals with the fallout from overseas bribery allegations.

All of the 14 firm's nominees were re-elected at the annual shareholders' meeting Friday. But the dissent against leaders shows how the company continues to be distracted by concerns about its handling of bribery allegations that surfaced last year at its Mexican unit.

The company also is being pressured to increase its oversight of factories abroad following a building collapse in April in Bangladesh that killed more than 1,100 garment workers. Walmart wasn't using any of the factories in the building at the time of the collapse, but it is the second-largest retail buyer of clothing in Bangladesh.

According to results released Monday, 12.1 per cent of the 3.29 billion shares were voted against re-election of Duke to the company's board.

Montreal conference

High jobless rates, income inequality creating cynicism, OECD head says

High unemployment and growing income inequalities have undermined public confidence in global institutions, the head of the one of the world's leading economic think-tanks said Monday.

"Today we have lost the trust in government, we have lost the trust in political parties ... in everything that we built as a society for 100 years and now there's an enormous degree of cynicism," Angel Gurria told an economic conference in Montreal.

Gurria, secretary-general of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, said voters are turning to strange options, sometimes just because they offer something different. People also see that many large multinational corporations pay little or no taxes. "Put it all in a cocktail, shake it and of course it blows (up) in your face," he said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fast food. Focus on value items helps McDonald's global sales to rebound

Cheap eats and new menu items helped McDonald's boost a key sales figure in May, bouncing back from a decline the previous month.

The world's biggest hamburger chain said Monday that global sales rose 2.6 per cent at restaurants open at least a year, helped by an extra Friday in the month. In the U.S., the figure rose 2.4 per cent, as the Dollar Menu and its new chicken wraps and egg-white breakfast sandwiches lifted results.

McDonald's has been struggling to increase sales as it faces changing eating habits and weak growth in the broader restaurant industry. Late last year, the company reported a decline in the monthly sales figure for the first time in nearly a decade. Soon after, it ousted the head of its U.S. division and renewed its focus on value and refreshing its menu.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Value focus

- McDonald's is trying to attract price-conscious customers by touting its Dollar Menu and other promotions, such as two Big Macs for the price of one. Some analysts say the strategy is bad for profit margins but the company says it's necessary to steal market share.

Earning power. College pays off even for dropouts with debt, new study finds

It sounds like the worst of all worlds — borrowing money for college, then dropping out and facing the debt without a degree.

But a new study argues that the investment in even a partial college education is still worth it, amounting to average earnings of $100,000 US more over a lifetime than for those who merely finish high school. That's a better investment return on average than stocks and bonds — though of course much lower than the return on college for those who finish.

"It is vastly better to get a college degree," said Adam Looney, policy director at The Hamilton Project, the Washington, D.C.-based think-tank that authored the report.

"But I think the evidence says that fears of dropping out, that there are big downside risks to trying it and not finishing it, I think those are overblown. For people who are interested in college, who have ambitions of going and have the ability and qualifications to succeed, I think the evidence suggests it's an extremely good deal right now."

WHY THE #@$% CAN'T I SWEAR?

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

Last Sunday, like every Sunday before that, my boyfriend and I went for brunch. Halfway through our meal, a neighbouring diner interrupted our conversation to reprimand us for using foul language in close proximity to his daughter who looked to be about 11-years-old and had surely heard these common curse words before.

I hadn't even been conscious of the tone of our discussion up until that point. We weren't cussing like a couple of drunken sailors; we'd perhaps let a few relatively harmless obscenities slip into our casual conversation about bedroom furniture.

Even though we both agreed the overreacting dad was being unreasonable, I glared at my boyfriend to encourage him to let it go — because it would have been even more uncivilized to get into a full-blown confrontation over our $18 eggs benedict.

After we left the restaurant we got into a discussion about parenting and whether or not we should feel obligated to watch our mouths around other people's offspring. I know there are certain times when conversations shouldn't steer into R-rated territory, but this wasn't one of those situations. It was 1:30 in the afternoon and the table next to us was enjoying their third round of mimosas; it wasn't exactly Chuck E. Cheese's.

Swearwords are usually employed out of laziness. There's almost always a more eloquent and imaginative way to get your point across, but sometimes we can't help ourselves. If you've ever stubbed your toe or gotten a parking ticket two minutes after your time expired you'd be forgiven for letting out a reactionary expletive. My parents were never the type to wash my mouth out with soap (perhaps that's obvious at this point) so I've never thought it was all that taboo to pepper conversations with emphatic vulgarities from time to time.

Like all forms of language, obscenities are cultural constructs that have a tendency to evolve over time. I don't deny that using profanity can be derogatory and offensive at times, but it's important to remember that there's nothing inherently evil about a collection of arbitrary syllables. It's not the words themselves that are immoral; it's how we use swearwords that give them their power to offend.

So while running a foul mouth in public might be in poor taste, I have to wonder if it's really all that damaging for young ones to overhear the F-word while enjoying a plate of French toast. I respect everyone's right to make their own parenting decisions, but it's a bit futile to try and shield your children entirely from the colourful language of everyday life in a big city.

Duck's swan song in Hong Kong

IMAGINECHINA/REX FEATURES

Famous rubber duck leaves town

Thousands turned out to bid farewell to a giant inflatable rubber duck that has captivated Hong Kong.

The southern Chinese city has taken the 16.5-metre duck, created by Dutch artist Florentijn Hofman, to its heart since it arrived at the beginning of May. The duck is now headed to Pittsburgh.

Hong Kong has been in the grip of duck mania for the 40 or so days the rubber duck was docked at the harbour. Stalls and shops sold merchandise ranging from T-shirts to duck tote bags. Restaurants created special duck dishes.

"I hope that it can bring happiness to the people in the different countries it visits," said 30-year-old Hong Kong resident Sam Tsang. METRO

"The friendly, floating rubber duck has healing properties: It can relieve tensions as well as define them. The rubber duck is soft, friendly and suitable for all ages!"

Joan and Melissa Rivers continue to sound off on fashion faux pas on their show Fashion Police. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Joan Rivers turns 80, plans to work 'forever'

No fashion fogey. Show biz veteran talks about her decision to do Fashion Police and the snark that keeps her young

"I'm having a great time," Joan Rivers crows before offering a brisk self-appraisal: "Everything is working; my mind is fine.

"The only time I play the age card is on planes when I'm trying to put a bag above the seat: 'I am 80 years old! Would someone PLEASE help me?!'"

Actually, she only turned 80 on Saturday, a milestone that has prompted the E! network to stage a Joan Rivers "takeover." Its regular one-hour edition of Fashion Police (airing Friday at 10 p.m. EDT) will be a black-tie birthday salute, preceded nightly through Thursday by special half-hours (at 10:30 p.m. EDT) featuring guest appearances by celebrities and even victims of past fashion slams.

This means frequent-flier Rivers would soon be back on a plane for Los Angeles to tape this five-day marathon while she marvels at the success of Fashion Police, which, since premiering three years ago has only tightened its grip in entertainment culture as a wicked hybrid of style and snark.

Rivers is well-served by her co-hosts Giuliana Rancic, Kelly Osbourne and George Kotsiopoulos, all of whom can deliver shrewd analysis as well as piercing gibes at red-carpet infractions.

But Fashion Police is perfectly tailored to the comedic skills of Rivers, as demonstrated by her 46-years-and-counting in show biz.

Hear her hail Uma Thurman, sheathed in Versace at the Cannes Film Festival: "This gown is so feminine, so silver — it's the Anderson Cooper of dresses!"

Hear her skewer a baggy, dizzyingly hued Alexander McQueen jumpsuit worn by actress Marion Cotillard at a Crash Magazine party: "The pattern looks like Precious sat on somebody's butterfly collection."

Sure, it's Police brutality, but Rivers and her "Joan Rangers" are never less than arresting.

At first, Rivers resisted the urge to do the show.

"I remember, I was in Vegas on a treadmill — cause you STILL try! — saying to my agent and (daughter) Melissa, 'cause Melissa's exec-producing, 'You're crazy! I'm not gonna do this! I'm not gonna commute!"'

Her mind was changed.

"We do the jokes, and we tell the truth, too," Rivers sums up proudly. "E! told me, 'Whatever you want to say, you say.' We're having so much fun! And our lawyers are so dear."

How long does she plan to keep working?

"Forever," says Rivers. This time, she's not joking.

Comedy

This is the End

Directors. Evan Goldberg and Seth Rogen

Stars. James Franco, Seth Rogen, Jay Baruchel, Jonah Hill

The cast of the films of Rogen and Goldberg's past find themselves stuck in Franco's fortified Hollywood mansion during the rapture. The actors, forsaken by God, find themselves with a respectable stash of food, booze, drugs and porno mags to help pass the time as they hide out from Satan. But as time goes by, the food and water dwindles and the friends begin to turn on each other. Based on a short from 2007 called Jay and Seth vs. The Apocalypse, Rogen and Goldberg have cobbled together a comic gem in This is the End. There's plenty of cameos from some of Hollywood's biggest names, all who seem intent on one-upping each other in the self-deprecation department. And while the last few Rogen-backed comedies have felt a little stale, this one is as fresh and fun as Pineapple Express — complete with a camcorder-filmed Pineapple Express sequel.

Oz the Great and Powerful

Director. Sam Raimi

Stars. James Franco, Mila Kunis, Michelle Williams

The yellow brick road is littered not just with potholes (as we alarmingly learn in Oz the Great and Powerful), but also the broken bones of previous attempts to reconjure the magic of Victor Fleming's 1939 classic film and the source Oz novels by L. Frank Baum. But this return trip to the Emerald City makes a relatively safe landing — perhaps too safe for fans of director Sam Raimi's Evil Dead and Spider-Man franchises, which played with genre expectations. It's both a strength and a weakness of Oz the Great and Powerful to be a true prequel, one that foregrounds James Franco as the wizard but otherwise doesn't monkey too much with Oz mythology or the 1939 movie that everybody has seen. The story is constructed with monochrome-to-colour transitions and Kansas-to-Oz character links that follow a familiar path.

PETER HOWELL

Hansel and Gretel: Witch Hunters

Director. Tommy Wirkola

Stars. Jeremy Renner, Gemma Arterton

Once you get past the mildly amusing idea of a grown-up Hansel (Jeremy Renner) and Gretel (Gemma Arterton) seeking violent payback for childhood trauma, the joke gets old very quickly. You see one exploded head or bullet-ridden hag, you've seen 'em all. The film isn't funny enough for comedy or scary enough for horror, and the anachronisms are ludicrous. The story is set in a medieval European village, but Hansel packs a machine gun and also takes insulin jabs for the sugar addiction forced upon him by an evil witch.

On a more serious note, Smith admits the news was hard to take that opening weekend. "Oh man, that was tragic," he says. "It's been almost two decades since I had a movie that wasn't No. 1."

The actress, who famously portrayed the shoe-obsessed Carrie Bradshaw in Sex and the City, is launching her own line of footwear, trenches and purses called SJP. The line will be available next year at Nordstrom. According to Vogue, she is teaming up with George Malkemus, the longtime CEO at Manolo Blahnik for the line, because she is basically going to milk the character of Carrie Bradshaw until there isn't a drop left.

Amanda Bynes

Is an Amanda Bynes rap album in our future?

At least someone is taking Amanda Bynes' claims that she should make a rap album seriously, as Daniel Herman of Chinga Chang Records says he has offered the troubled starlet a deal. "I cleared the project with the Orchard and Sony Entertainment, and they gave me the green light to go ahead," Herman tells Radar Online. "The fact that Amanda wants to do hip hop music means that Chinga Chang is the best place for her to do this." Herman, who has "reached out to Amanda's attorneys to negotiate the deal," is already looking to get her first hip hop feud up and running: "I think she's more gangster than Drake," he says.

Justin Bieber

You won't find him in da club

Sometimes it's not so easy for Justin Bieber to have a good time. The Canadian pop star was refused entry at Lure nightclub in Hollywood this weekend, according to E! News. "Someone from Justin's team had come earlier in the day and told the club that he would be showing up. The club told him they wouldn't let him in because he's not 21," a source says. "Bieber came anyway and tried to sneak in through a back door." But his plan was no match for a well-intentioned shout-out from rapper the Game: "The Game was on the mic at this point and saw Bieber trying to get in and shouted that Bieber was on his way inside," the source explains. "That's when security saw him and escorted him out immediately. He left right away. He seemed really embarrassed."

Prince Harry moonlights as Prince Charming

Prince Harry is living up to his title, at least according to one fellow soldier who claims the young Royal came to his defence after receiving threats from other soldiers over his sexuality. Lance Corporal James Wharton writes in his new memoir, Out in the Army, about an incident during training in Canada in 2008 when six other men threatened to attack him. "I told him: 'I think I'm about to be murdered by the infantry,'" Wharton recalls. "He had a complete look of bewilderment on his face. I didn't hold back: I told him everything that had gone on. I couldn't stop the tears from welling up in my eyes. He said, 'Right. I'm going to sort this s— out once and for all.' Harry climbed out of the tank and started having a go. I worried he was about to make the whole thing worse, but he wasn't holding back. Prince Harry was sticking up for me and putting a stop to the trouble. I had been on track for a battering and had been rescued."

Hold your breath and dive in, it's yoga for you swimmers

Summer trend. Glide your way through the water with this yoga sequence dedicated to swimmers

ROMINA McGUINNESS
life@metronews.ca

Are you into looking good at the pool? You'll need more than a hot swimsuit.

"If you want to improve your swimming technique and stamina, all you're going to need is a flexible spine, a strong core and lung capacity," says Sophie Lewis, yoga teacher at London's Triyoga Studio and personal trainer to elite triathletes. "A regular yoga practice will help develop all these things and enable you to move more effectively through any medium — water or air."

Here's how:

It strengthens your core, helping you push forward more powerfully in the water.

"If you just rely on your shoulder or your upper arm strength, you're going to fatigue very quickly," says Lewis. "But if you find your strength from your centre, that's a much better platform for stamina and you'll be able to keep going for long periods of time. Just imagine you're swimming in a smartie tube and you want to contain everything into that tube. Drawing your navel centre in and getting the power to push out from your core really helps," she explains.

She gets a 10 out of 10 for effort. WSPORTS CONCEPTS

It deepens and lengthens breath

"As a swimmer, you want to increase your lung capacity. But once you hit the cold water, the tendency is to panic," says Lewis.

"Breath becomes shallow and doesn't go all the way down to the belly. Alternate nostril breathing maximizes the flow of breath through both nostrils equally. This is good preparation for bilateral breathing (lifting the head alternately right then left out of the water to breath) and a vital warm up for the lungs."

Get started

Sophie Lewis' pre-pool warm up

"To warm up the shoulder girdle and prepare the body for the swimming action, get into revolved triangle. Then circle the raised arm, reaching forward alongside your face to open the side flank (the fleshy part of the side between the ribs and the hip). Let your arm fall in front of your chest, circling it back to the hip and up to sky."

YOGA FOR SWIMMERS SEQUENCE

Puppy Dog

Start on all fours with your knees hip-width apart and hands shoulder-width apart. Stack your hips above your knees and walk your arms out in front of you. Hug the upper outer arms in and press into your palms.

Cow face arms with strap

Half moon with a block

Start with legs a few feet apart, one in front of the other. Gaze downward and bend your front knee as you extend your front arm, bringing your fingertips to rest on the front of your toes. Lift your rear leg up until it is parallel with the floor. Straighten your front leg and draw your left glute inward to open your hips. Lift your top arm straight up and stack your shoulders. Move your gaze upward to further challenge your balance. Repeat on the opposite side.

Revolved triangle with a block

Stand with your feet hip distance apart. Step back one leg length with your left leg and turn your left foot outward 45 degrees, aligning your heels. Square your hips forward and place your right hand on your hip. Lift your left arm up into full extension and lean forward, keeping your back flat and arm reaching straight out in front of you. Place your left hand on the floor at the outer edge of your front foot. Extend your chest, and then press your left hand into the floor to spiral your chest open. Extend your right arm straight toward the ceiling. Stack your shoulders and gaze upwards. Repeat on the opposite side.

Reclined bound angle

Begin on your back, with your knees bent wide and the soles of your feet together. Bring your heels as close to your pelvis as you comfortably can. Lift your chest and draw your shoulder blades down your back to lengthen your neck. Take your arms wide with your palms facing up.

Pain relief 101: know your meds

Health issues. Opioids can be highly addictive and anti-inflammatory drugs have been linked to a whole list of health issues

You may have joint pain but get to know the issues with your medications before taking anything. NEWS CANADA

'Tis the season to get outside and enjoy the sunshine with friends and family. But for the 10 per cent of Canadians that The Arthritis Society says are living with osteoarthritis (OA), enjoying the warm weather isn't always easy. Activities such as biking, golfing and gardening, for example, may be a challenge if they are suffering with chronic knee pain.

"The pain of knee OA can not only impact one's lifestyle, it can also have negative effects on productivity at home and at work, and on emotional health," says Dr. Philip Baer, Rheumatologist. "Working with a doctor to develop an individualized treatment plan can help patients with knee OA better manage their pain, so they can reconnect with their lives."

While there are a number of medications available to reduce the pain and discomfort associated with OA of the knee, it's important to ensure that pain is managed in the safest way possible. Following these tips can help.

Know the risks

There are risks associated with some pain relievers. Opioids, for example, may be highly addictive, while gastrointestinal bleeding has been reported with use of non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDS), and high doses of acetaminophen can lead to liver toxicity. There are other treatments, however, that can provide effective pain relief, are non-addictive and well-tolerated.

Don't mix

The effect of some medications can sometimes be increased or decreased when administered in combination with other medication, including prescription and over-the-counter (OTC) drugs, and even food. A health-care professional can advise on any potential interactions between medications.

Sunshine, lollipops and ... allergies?

BEST HEALTH MINUTE
Bonnie Munday

Best Health Magazine

Can you be allergic to sunshine?

Yes, but a true sun allergy— called solar urticaria — is very rare, affecting an estimated 0.5 per cent of people.

"Some 10 per cent of the world's population might have a skin reaction when exposed to the sun," says Dr. Gordon Searles, a dermatologist and president of the Canadian Dermatology Association in the latest issue of Best Health magazine, on newsstands now.

And we're not talking about sunburn here.

The reactions can be broken down into two types: sun allergy and sun sensitivity.

"People with an allergy will break out in hives when exposed to the sun, in the same way that someone who is allergic to shellfish would break out in hives," Searles says.

The reaction is very quick, and the way to treat it is to avoid the sun. But unlike other allergies, it's not life-threatening — just uncomfortable.

Sun sensitivity, on the other hand, is far more common.

It's characterized by little red itchy bumps or patches of redness like a rash, and the reaction is delayed.

It doesn't happen until later in the day or even the day after sun exposure and it can look like an exaggerated sunburn, says Searles.

While some sun sensitivities can be a side effect of certain medications, the most common cause is called polymorphous light eruption, which is an internal immune system reaction to sun exposure.

SLEEP TIGHT

LANALANGLOIS/VEER

STUDIES SHOW THAT SLEEP IS VERY IMPORTANT TO GOOD HEALTH

One of Canada's top sleep experts appreciates the importance of a good night's sleep.

"The more research we do, the clearer it becomes that sleep is incredibly important to good health," says Joseph De Koninck, PhD.

For more than 30 years, De Koninck has taught psychology students and run a two-bedroom sleep laboratory at the University of Ottawa. During the course of his career, researchers from around the world have established ever stronger links between sleep and health. And he worries that the growing pressures of the modern age — careers that require round-the-clock availability — will affect the long-term sleep patterns of Canadians.

People with poor sleep habits are at greater risk for a number of chronic conditions, including obesity, diabetes and heart disease. Sleep deprivation also impairs memory and judgment, increasing the risk of traffic accidents and work mishaps, and often leads to problems in interpersonal relationships.

Researchers continue to uncover exactly how sound sleep contributes to health. One mechanism involves the regulation of hormones. When we sleep, our bodies secrete hormones that help to control appetite and metabolism. When we don't get enough sleep, our bodies produce extra cortisol, often described as the "stress hormone," and insulin, the hormone that regulates glucose processing and promotes fat storage. As a result, poor sleep can make us feel hungry even though we have had enough to eat, and leave us too tired to exercise off the extra calories.

Since insufficient sleep influences the way we process glucose — the high-energy carbohydrate that cells use for fuel — it may also play a role in type 2 diabetes, a chronic condition increasingly prevalent in Canada.

There is also research to suggest that even a single night of inadequate sleep can increase the effects of hypertension. One study found that people with hypertension who have a poor night's sleep experience elevated blood pressure throughout the next day.

Given all the risks associated with poor sleep habits, it should come as no surprise that people who don't sleep well tend to have shorter lives. Data from three studies revealed that averaging five hours or less of sleep per night shortened life expectancy by approximately 15 per cent. – Peter Boyle

YOU'LL BE DREAMING IN NO TIME

MOCKER/VEER

Follow these tips to fall into dream land..

1 A cup of warm milk. Sometimes, those old wives' tales ring true. Milk contains tryptophan, an amino acid that can make you drowsy.

2 A hot bath. For many children, a nice relaxing soak in the tub is a pre-bed ritual. If it worked when you were a child, it might work now that you are (pretty much) all grown up.

3 Choose your evening drinks wisely. For many people, caffeine after dinner is a real no-no. Choose decaffeinated coffee, tea and pop or avoid them altogether, along with chocolate. And while alcohol can make you drowsy, drinking too much interferes with sleep.

4 Stick to a schedule. Make a point of going to bed and getting up at about the same time each day. Most bodies thrive on routine.

5 Stretch it out. Slow, gentle stretches accompanied by easy, deep breathing works wonders for many people. Although vigorous exercise might leave you awake, low-intensity yoga can be a great way to de-stress at the end of the day.

6 Massage. I'll rub your back if you rub mine. A few minutes of massage will not only promote sleep, it will also do wonders for your relationship. For the full effect, add a drop of soothing aromatherapy oil (lavender and chamomile scents are especially calming).

7 Get rid of distractions. Your bedroom should be for sleeping, dressing and sex — no laptops, iPads, television or other distractions allowed. Put some physical distance between the place where you sleep and the places where you live the rest of your life.

8 Create an ideal sleep environment. Do whatever you need to promote sleep — if the morning sun bothers you, get thicker curtains or blinds; if noise bothers you, close doors and windows or add sound insulation.

9 Invest in a good-quality mattress. Given that mattresses last 10 to 12 years, don't be afraid to spend $1,000 on one that you find comfortable.

10 Free your mind. Once you close your eyes, allow your mind to wander freely; avoid judging or guiding whatever thoughts come up. You will be dreaming in no time.

PILLOW TALK

SHIFT WORK CAN PLAY HAVOC WITH SLEEP PATTERNS

Society runs around the clock, requiring some people to work while others sleep. By some estimates, up to 30 per cent of Canadian full-time employees regularly work hours outside the normal range of 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Today, it's not only doctors, nurses and emergency response personnel who must burn the midnight oil, but also workers in call centres, gyms and casinos.

Without appropriate precautions, however, shift work can be unhealthy, according to Dr. Joti Samra, a clinical psychologist and researcher in Yaletown (Vancouver).

"Many suffer from shift work sleep disorder, a clinically recognized condition that results in chronic insomnia or fatigue" Samra says. "This can lead to a host of nasty illnesses, from cardiovascular disease and hypertension, to gastrointestinal disorders and even some forms of cancer."

According to Samra, three interrelated factors can make shift work unhealthy:

Disruption of the body's natural 24-hour clock: Many of the body's functions — from digestion to body temperature, blood pressure and pulse — are regulated by our so-called body clock.

Adoption or worsening of unhealthy behaviours: Research indicates that shift workers are more likely than others to smoke, drink heavily, eat poorly and have body-weight issues.

Physiological stress: An interruption in sleep stimulates the body to release hormones that can lead to increased feelings of anxiety, depression, irritability and apathy, and decreased levels of concentration and focus. Some research suggests that long-term shift work can cause shrinkage in the two glands (amygdala and hippocampus) that control focus, concentration, morals and values.

The following are sound sleep tips for shift workers:

- Stick to a pattern: Go to bed and wake up at around the same time each day (even on weekends).
- Go to sleep in the dark and wake up to the light (i.e., open the blinds or go outside with your coffee).
- Limit napping (especially if you have trouble falling asleep when you are ready for bed).
- Expose yourself to outside light (i.e., open blinds) upon waking.
- No caffeine within five hours of bedtime.
- No nicotine or exercise within three hours of bedtime.
- Don't drink. Even one drink of alcohol can interfere with the quality and restorative value of sleep.
- Create a consistent and relaxing bedtime routine; make a clear distinction between daytime (alert) activities and bedtime (relaxing) activities.
- If you can't fall asleep within 20 minutes, get up and engage in non-stimulating activities (quiet music, reading) and don't get back into bed until you are sleepy (and not just tired).

– Peter McKinnon

SCHEDULES

The Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety also recommends that employers design shift schedules carefully. Longer periods on the same shift (i.e., two weeks or more) help workers establish and maintain healthy sleep routines. If shifts must be rotated, it's best that they move forward in time — from days to evenings to nights and back to days again. Employers should also ensure proper levels of lighting and ventilation. Cafeteria services should promote a nutritious diet for those working all shifts. Finally, employers should organize recreational and social activities that suit the schedules of shift workers.

YOUR SUMMER SLEEP SANCTUARY

Lack of sleep can often come upon us when the seasons shift. The heat and humidity of warmer months can make it difficult for some to sleep, especially for people who don't have air conditioning.

Canadian physicians recognize the importance of a good night's sleep. One way to improve your sleep is to maintain a cool bedroom temperature. Here are some other useful tips:

• Make your day work for you. Daily exercise and a consistent routine of going to bed and waking up at the same time will help program your body to wind down when it's time to sleep. Calming activities, such as leisure reading, will also help you relax and ease the transition into deeper sleep.

• Create a sleep sanctuary. Dim the lights in the evening to tell your body bedtime is approaching and sleep in a dark room. Your bedroom should be a sanctuary from all the stresses of the day. Keep it cool, quiet and free from distractions.

• While room lights, TV, computers and other electronics illuminate our worlds well beyond nightfall and give us the ability to stay active after dark, scientists are now contemplating how this prolonged exposure to light might interfere with our bodies' naturally programmed sleep patterns. In other words, computers, cellphones and work assignments should be out of sight.

• Have a backup plan. Lessen the pressures of trying to fall asleep by selecting a calming activity that's right for you. If you aren't sleepy, simply get out of bed and do something relaxing in dim light. Return to bed only when you are sleepy.

• Talk to your doctor if sleeplessness persists. Sometimes lifestyle changes and behavioural approaches are not enough to correct the issue.

Marinade for protection

A marinade does more for your meat than just add flavour. It is also protecting you from carcinogens created when you grill meat. Those blackened marks contain taste but there are also cancer causing agents at play, namely heterocyclic amines (HCAs) and polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (PAHs). With barbecue season fully upon us, you'll want to know how to protect yourself.

- Marinating meat for merely a minute helps create a protective layer that reduces the protein damage
- Your marinade must contain an acid, like vinegar, and some spices
- Reducing the temperature and preventing charring helps
- Choosing chicken and fish over red meat reduces risk
- Trim as much fat as possible from all meats. The drips and flares make matters worse
- Dry rubs can be mixed with a little bit of vinegar to create the same effect

Classic Marinade Formula

- 1/2 cup oil (grapeseed or canola)
- 1/3 cup fresh citrus juice (lime, lemon, orange)
- 1/8 cup vinegar (various flavours)
- 1-3 tsp dried herbs or spices
- 1-2 tbsp minced shallot, onion, garlic, ginger or any combination of all
- 1 tsp sea salt

MBA OFFERS COMMUNITY AT ITS CORE

There are many master of business administration programs across the globe, but only one that includes community in its core and resonates with people who wish to make a difference where they live and work.

It is the MBA in community economic development, offered by Cape Breton University's Shannon School of Business in the Saskatoon area on weekends.

"My professional background is social work, and I obtained my master of social work over 20 years ago," says Allison Scott, MBA in CED 2012 grad.

"Having stayed in the child welfare sector for my entire career, I have a good grasp of the social work. However, the MSW degree did not prepare me for a senior administrative role, which requires business and leadership skills. The MBA in CED filled this gap, and has helped me integrate the business perspective into my work. Now I have the best of both worlds."

With more than 200 students and growing, the MBA in CED is being delivered in five different cities over select weekends, including the Saskatoon area, with a second cohort now in progress.

The MBA in CED consists of 15 courses and an applied research project. Saskatchewan students can complete the program in a 26-month period by taking classes on select weekends at the Great Plains College campus in Warman.

LEARN ALL THE BUSINESS SKILLS YOU NEED

Saskatoon Business College is in the business of changing lives.

Saskatoon Business College prides itself in training the best office professionals that are among the highest in demand in their field.

"We help our students succeed from the time they start to when they are employed," says Rich Chapman, co-owner of Saskatoon Business College. "And when they leave, they have some excellent skills under their belt."

Saskatoon Business College is accredited by the Canadian Education & Training Accreditation Commission (CETAC), and is one of 18 nationally.

Students at Saskatoon Business College will always learn on the most up-to-date software on computers in state-of-the art simulation labs.

By creating a strong network in the business community, each student will also have the opportunity to take part in a job placement component, where they will have a chance to work in a real office setting, preparing them for their future careers after graduation.

Chapman says the student support does not end at the time of graduation.

"Once students are done, we want to make sure we help them find jobs in their related field," Chapman says.

They offer four intakes a year, with applications now being accepted for the September and October starts.

Follow the bride's request

She won't be upset if she doesn't have a bachelorette

CHARLES THE BUTLER
askcharlesthebutler@metronews.ca
For more, visit charlesmacpherson.com

Hi Charles,
When my best friend asked me to be her maid of honour at her wedding, she pointedly stated that she did not want nor did she expect to have a bachelorette party. She told me that she had been to such parties in the past (complete with male strippers and nearly invisible lingerie) that have turned her off of the whole affair. She mentioned a few months later that she and her husband-to-be wanted to organize a Jack and Jill type celebration for the wedding party. She has never been the type to say one thing and expect another.
Nevertheless, my co-workers insist that I am obligated to organize a separate celebration just for the girls or else I will forever regret not giving her that special moment.
What do I do?
Thank you, Michelle

Dear Michelle,
I am confident that I would absolutely follow the bride's request.

Personally I have never been one to agree with nor enjoy surprise parties and I think that putting people on the spot is not an enjoyable way to start an evening.

First and foremost you are not obligated to organize anything the bride has asked you not to do.

Now if you want, you can always suggest a low-key party, like afternoon tea or drinks and dinner at a restaurant.

That way, the bride will be able to celebrate with the girls in a way that doesn't make her uncomfortable. After all, you don't need strippers and nearly invisible lingerie to have a good time. Stick to your gut feelings as it appears you are on the right track!

The wedding dress whisperer

Bride comes first.
Randy Fenoli is on a mission to make every girl's dream day a reality

MEREDITH ENGEL
Metro World News in New York City

Randy Fenoli of Say Yes to the Dress and Randy to the Rescue (which just began its second season and airs Fridays on TLC) estimates that he's helped about one million brides get ready for their big day.

But being a bride's advocate never wears on the marriage maestro: "I never get tired of it," he tells us.

His dedication means that since not everyone can make it to NYC's Kleinfeld, where Fenoli consults, he takes his show on the road — literally. On Randy to the Rescue, Fenoli travels around the U.S., creating pop-up bridal salons for the betrothed and then giving them makeovers.

Legions of brides turn to Fenoli for his advice, and after speaking with him, we've come up with some reasons as to why we think that is:

He'll fight for his bride:
"I absolutely will not compromise. We were in one city working with a bridal salon and this girl came in. She showed me a picture of this dress that she had tried on, like, six states away, and she fell in love with the dress, but she was like, 'Well, I can't get this today.' You could tell this girl was in love with this dress. And the cameras are on her and the family's there, and finally she said yes to a dress. But when I walked off the set, I was like, 'I'm sorry, that is not her dress. She is not happy.' So I woke up the next morning and called every single bridal salon in, like, a three-hour radius and found the dress."

He doesn't believe in bridezillas:
"Brides want everything to be perfect, and it should be! ... I would want it to be perfect, too. You're spending how much money? You've waited how many years? You've invited how many people, we're taking how many pictures, and how many people are watching? It should be right."

Randy Fenoli fights for the brides he works with. HANDOUT

He goes beyond the dress:
"Brides come in and show their consultant a photograph. Most consultants take it literally and are like, 'OK, that's the dress you want.' I don't just look at the dress. I look at the girl in the dress and I look at the feeling (the picture evokes)."

All your money going in the gas tank?

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

What could you do with $2,322? Well, for one thing, you could drive a small car.

The Canadian Automobile Association estimates that the average annual operating cost, including gas, oil, tires and maintenance of a small car driven 18,000 kilometres a year (in this case a Civic LX), amounts to $2,322.

For a mid-sized car (Camry LE) the tab rises to just more than $3,000. Both test cars were new, four cylinder models and the average gasoline price was pegged at $1.23 a litre.

However, right now only New Brunswick enjoys $1.23 at the pump while all the western provinces — except Alberta at around $1.27 — are well over $1.30. So much for living near the gas supply!

Add in long commutes and less fuel-efficient cars and many Canadians are paying well north of $3,500 annually for their wheels. All the more reason to use these six tips to chop gas costs by as much as 25 per cent.

Time to fill up again! But you can save some gas money by changing a few of your driving habits. ISTOCK IMAGES

1. Turn off the ignition
Idling shortens the life of engine oil by as much as 75 per cent and increases gas costs. Excessive use of the heater or air conditioner also boosts gas consumption.

2. Soft foot the pedal
Darting away from a stoplight consumes 40 per cent more fuel than easing away. It also increases emissions by 400 per cent.

3. Be a turtle
Travelling at an average speed of 100 km/h versus 120 will save 20 per cent on fuel consumption. You'll arrive in about the same time and more safely.

4. Don't skimp on maintenance
Regular tune-ups, lubrication and oil changes reduce engine wear and improve gas mileage.

5. Check the pressure
Keeping tires properly inflated improves handling and reduces wear and gas consumption — cutting up to two weeks worth of gasoline annually.

6. Lighten up
Excess weight reduces engine life and decreases gas mileage, especially for smaller cars.

Following all six recommendations could result in savings of between $580 and $750 annually, based on the CAA tests. Not bad for a few changes in driving habits.

MAXIMIZE YOUR FERTILITY

MANY WAYS TO IMPROVE CHANCES OF PREGNANCY

According to 2012 Statistics Canada data, up to 16 per cent of heterosexual couples in which the woman is between 18 and 44 years of age are experiencing infertility — that's almost double since infertility was last measured in Canada in 1992.

Not surprisingly, the older the woman, the higher the prevalence of infertility. Yet difficulty conceiving is also rising among younger women, the study found. In 1984, about five per cent of couples with a female partner between 18 and 29 were infertile. By 2009-10, the prevalence for that age group ranged from seven to 13.7 per cent.

"The good news is that women and men can do many things to maximize their fertility," says Dr. Kimberly Liu, a staff physician at Toronto's Mount Sinai Centre for Fertility and Reproductive Health.

Here are six :

KNOW THAT AGE IS A FACTOR

There are many reasons why a woman might not try to get pregnant in her fertile 20s — perhaps her financial situation isn't stable or she hasn't met her partner yet. "We can't change our age, but it's important to be aware that fertility starts declining when a woman is in her mid-30s," Liu says.

TAKE FOLIC ACID

To prevent neural tube defects such as spina bifida in their baby, women should start taking 0.4 to one milligram of daily folic acid supplements two to three months before she plans to get pregnant and continue while pregnant.

QUIT SMOKING AND DRINKING

These habits affect the fertility of both women and men. "No smoking and drinking at all is advisable for optimal fertility," Liu says.

EAT PROPERLY AND EXERCISE

Having a healthy diet and being fit will help conception. "Being underweight or overweight can negatively affect fertility," Liu says.

GET LUCKY THREE TIMES A WEEK

It's more important to have regular sex than try to chart ovulation. "Sperm can stay in a women's system for up to five days," Liu says. "So if a couple has sex three times a week, a steady supply of sperm will be present."

STOP USING LUBRICANTS

They can affect motility, which is the ability of sperm to move properly toward an egg. Mineral oil and canola oil are "sperm-friendly" natural lubricants.

HOW A COMMON MYTH IS BORN

SEPARATING FACT FROM FICTION FOR MAKING A BABY

There are so many misconceptions about getting pregnant that it's surprising that anyone actually does. For some couples, it's an easier accomplishment than others.

According to Dr. Kimberly Liu, a staff physician at Toronto's Mount Sinai Centre for Fertility and Reproductive Health, separating fact from fiction will put you on the right path to making a baby.

Here are six common myths debunked:

1 Abstinence equals a better buildup of sperm. Some couples believe that if they only have sex once a month, the sperm will be "stored up" and they will have a better chance of conceiving. Not so. "Abstinence of more than 10 days leads to poor-quality sperm," Liu says. "It improves your chances of conceiving if you have sex about three times a week."

2 Ovulation occurs when a woman's temperature rises. In fact, basal body temperature rises (by a mere half-degree) after ovulation. The two best days to conceive are the day before and the day of ovulation. "If women wait for a rise in temperature to have sex, it's too late," Liu says.

3 Having sex on certain days will lead to a boy or girl. Believe it or not, some of Liu's patients think this is true. "There is no scientific evidence to support that."

4 Fertility problems occur only in women. Infertility affects both men and women. Men can experience low sperm count or poor sperm motility, while women could have a plethora of pregnancy-preventing conditions, such as a hormone imbalance, a cyst, fibroids or thyroid problems.

5 Healthy women in their 40s can conceive easily. While it's true that some can, many will have difficulty. "When you hear about celebrities in their mid- to late 40s who have had babies, you don't always get the full story on how they were able to conceive," Liu says. "It can give a false sense of how easy it is to get pregnant at that age."

6 It will be a cinch to a conceive again. Fertility problems can occur at any age, anytime, even if a woman has gotten pregnant easily in the past. "Many of my patients are in their 30s and had no trouble conceiving their first child," Liu says.

HEALTHY MOMS LEAD TO HEALTHY BABIES

Do you love to work out, and are you also working on getting pregnant? Research reveals that women who exercise regularly and eat nutritious foods before they conceive have lower health risks for both themselves and their babies during their pregnancy.

What's more, according to The Society of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists of Canada (SOGC), women who are physically fit before they get pregnant report having fewer aches and pains and feel that they have more energy throughout their pregnancies.

The SOGC advises that pregnant women should aim for at least 30 minutes of moderate exercise (enough to make you sweat) five days a week. This will help prepare for the physical challenges of pregnancy and labour, and help maintain a healthy body mass index (BMI) during pregnancy.

If you were active for at least six months before you conceived, ask your doctor about whether it's OK for you to continue your sports or workouts safely. As you move further into your pregnancy and your body changes, you may feel mild aches and pains due to looser joints and shifting body weight. You may need to revise your fitness plan each trimester to reduce the risk of falls and limit high-impact activities.

If you weren't active previously, the SOGC advises that you "start low and go slow." Try regular brisk walking, swimming, strength training (make sure the program is tailored to pregnant women) or other low-impact activities that will strengthen your heart and lungs and tone your muscles. It's recommended that you wait until your second trimester to begin a program like this.

WONG SZE FEI/VEER

The R. Samuel McLaughlin Foundation Exercise and Pregnancy Laboratory at Western University in London, Ont., was established in 1989 to conduct research investigating the effects of exercise on the pregnant woman and her fetus.

Michelle Mottola, the lab's director, touts the benefits of exercising while pregnant on the lab's website at uwo.ca/fhs/EPL.

"What a mother eats and how active she is has a huge impact," she says. "Healthy mothers lead to healthy babies, which will then lead to healthy futures."

PAY ATTENTION TO NUTRITION AND FITNESS

When Hollywood entertainer Jessica Simpson was pregnant with her first child, she admitted to eating lots of macaroni and cheese and buttered Pop Tarts. Indulging in those and other food cravings and not exercising led to a 60-pound weight gain before Simpson delivered daughter Maxwell in May 2012.

Simpson has proudly stated that she has only gained half that amount with her second pregnancy (she is due to deliver a boy soon). That's because, this time, she has paid attention to nutrition and fitness.

From a medical perspective, there are valid concerns about a woman who fails to properly nourish her pregnant body. Women of normal weight before getting pregnant are advised to put on between 25 to 35 pounds. Gaining more — or being overweight pre-pregnancy — can make moms more likely to develop gestational diabetes and to give birth to heavier babies who can be harder to deliver.

According to Health Canada, eating a healthy diet of lean protein, whole grains, fresh fruits and vegetables during pregnancy is one of the best things a woman can do for herself and her baby. It's important to keep in mind that the food mom eats is also baby's main source of nutrition.

Supplementing with folic acid, which helps lower the risk of neural tube defects, is also important. Although folic acid is found in some foods, women who are trying to conceive and those who have need a daily vitamin containing 400 micrograms (0.4 mg) of folic acid.

Eating well, combined with taking a daily prenatal multivitamin, can give a woman the nutrients she needs to support a healthy pregnancy.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Health Canada offers these recommendations to ensure a healthy pregnancy:

- Follow Eating Well with Canada's Food Guide to eat the amount and type of food that is right for you and your baby.
- Have at least 150 grams of cooked fish each week. Fish contains omega-3 fatty acids and other important nutrients for pregnancy.
- How much weight you should gain depends on your body mass index.

Is it time for a baby?

Maximize your chances by planning for success.

Nothing's more natural than getting pregnant – right? But nature can certainly take her time!

The fact is, there are only a few days each cycle – before and around ovulation – when you can actually get pregnant[1]. Since you're at your most fertile for just two of them, you need to know when those 2 days are. Yet 1 in 2 couples don't – and could be aiming for the wrong time altogether[2]. Which eventually makes trying for a baby more tiring than exciting.

As ovulation approaches there is a sudden rise in the level of Luteinising Hormone (LH) known as the LH surge. This is the key hormone that triggers ovulation and can be detected in urine. Ovulation occurs when the egg is released from the follicle into the Fallopian tube. This usually happens between the 12th and the 16th day before the next period starts. The follicle then collapses and wastes away. The day of the LH surge and the day after are the 2 most fertile days of the cycle.

So when the time is right, you'll want to give yourself the best chance of success. Fortunately, there are ways to find your fertile days – some more practical than others. You could test for changes in your basal body temperature. But since temperature only rises after ovulation, it's unlikely to predict fertile days in that cycle[3]. Instead, you'll need to chart it daily over several months – quite a lot of work and rather inaccurate, since every woman is unique and nearly half of all women's cycles vary by up to 7 days[4] anyway.

Luteinising hormone in your urine shows when your body is ready to release an egg.

Ovulation Tests are easier and more reliable. These identify your two most fertile days in advance, by identifying when the body is about to release an egg (or ovulate). And being simple urine tests that just take minutes, they're also completely natural and non-invasive.

The most effective is Clearblue Digital Ovulation Test[5], from the world's best selling brand in home pregnancy and fertility tests. It's over 99% accurate and the only one with easy-read Digital results – so no fuzzy lines to interpret.

Ideally, you start by recording your cycle on a calendar for one month (download one at www.clearblue.com). Once you know your usual cycle length, those quick daily urine tests couldn't be easier. You have seven in a pack and as soon as you get a 'smiley face', the rest is up to you and your partner!

Man advantage a cup final misnomer

NHL playoffs. Penalty killing and goaltending in spotlight as Chicago and Boston prepare for championship series

Tuukka Rask makes a save during Bruins practice on Monday at TD Garden in Boston. ELISE AMENDOLA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When it comes to power plays in the Stanley Cup final, the Chicago Blackhawks and Boston Bruins might just prefer to keep going with everyone on the ice.

The two teams left in the NHL playoffs have been lousy with the man advantage and terrific at killing penalties during the post-season.

When the Blackhawks are forced to play a man down, Michael Frolik and Marcus Kruger are so persistent it almost resembles an even-strength situation. And the Bruins have hulking defenceman Zdeno Chara and goalie Tuukka Rask, who is swallowing everything at the net these days.

Heading into Game 1 on Wednesday night, goals on special teams have been so scarce that a couple for either side could tip the series.

"The special teams are kind of key, if you want to (have) success," Frolik said after Chicago held an optional practice on Monday. "We try to talk about it all the time and make sure we're on the same page. It's especially going to be key right now. We've got to make sure we are ready for the challenge."

So far, so good on that front for the Bruins and Blackhawks.

With Frolik and Kruger tying up the action on top of the zone, Chicago has allowed just three goals in 58 power-play opportunities for an astounding 94.8 per cent kill rate. Los Angeles got two of them in the Western Conference final, but one was a meaningless goal by Tyler Toffoli at the end of the Blackhawks' 4-2 win in Game 2.

The 92.5 per cent finish for the 2000 New Jersey Devils is the best playoff rate for a Stanley Cup champion in the last 25 years, according to STATS.

"I think they do a good job of fronting shots," Boston coach Claude Julien said of Chicago's penalty killers. "You really have to work hard to get the shots through. That's what they are, they're very patient; they're very aggressive when you do lose, I guess, control of the puck and if they feel they can get on you, they'll get on you quick. They've done a good job that way."

Pittsburgh had converted an NHL-best 28.3 per cent of its power-play chances heading into the Eastern Conference final against Boston, but the high-powered Penguins went 0 for 15 with the man advantage during the Bruins' impressive four-game sweep.

Rask up to the task

"We're facing a goalie that in the last round was as good as any of the goalies we've seen over a segment of two years in the playoffs."

Blackhawks coach Joel Quenneville on Bruins goalie Tuukka Rask who has a 1.75 goals-against average and .943 save percentage in the 2013 playoffs. Boston has yielded seven goals in 52 power-play opportunities for an 86.5 per cent kill rate in the post-season.

National soccer body suspends Que. federation

The Canadian Soccer Association says it has suspended a provincial association over its refusal to let turban-wearing children play.

The organization says it had to intervene because the Quebec Soccer Federation showed no sign of overturning its decision to restrict turban-wearing Sikhs from the pitch.

"The Quebec Soccer Federation's inaction has forced us to take measures in order to ensure soccer remains accessible to the largest number of Canadians," it said in a statement Monday night.

The national organization said last week it expected the Quebec association to reverse the ban, which has drawn international news coverage and condemnation from several federal politicians.

The Edmonton Oilers officially announced Dallas Eakins as their new head coach on Monday, replacing the fired Ralph Krueger.

Eakins is the fourth coach in the past five seasons for the Oilers, who have not made the playoffs since reaching the Stanley Cup final in 2006.

"This isn't about winning one game or winning one season," Eakins said. "We want to be in the mix every year to win."

MLB. Encarnacion ready for another all-star snub

Despite continuing to rank among the game's top sluggers, Toronto's Edwin Encarnacion is in danger of once again being snubbed by baseball's Midsummer Classic.

Listed on the all-star ballot as a designated hitter, Encarnacion is currently fourth in fan voting behind Boston's David Ortiz, Texas' Lance Berkman and Cleveland's Mark Reynolds.

Among the foursome, Encarnacion has the most hits, home runs and RBIs.

Ortiz leads the way in batting average, as well as on-base and slugging, but he has played 17 fewer games. Encarnacion is the only one in the group who hasn't missed a game this season. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE
